Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

6. Claims 12, 13, 22, 31, 32, 39-42 and 46-49 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over AllMeetings.com as applied above.

As per claims 12, 13 and 22, www.AllMeetings.com does not expressly disclose the system and method as recited in claims 1 and 15, wherein said meeting scheduling data comprises information regarding cancelled meetings. However, www.AllMeetings.com does disclose receiving various meeting scheduling data such as start date, length, airport and attendees is received by the web-based interface (reference B, page 1). It is old and well known in the art of meeting planning to cancel or reschedule a cancelled meeting in a system if the meeting was initially scheduled in the system in order to maintain accurate scheduling information. Thus, it would have been obvious for a meeting planning system to receive information regarding cancelled meetings because doing so provides users of the system with accurate meeting schedule information, thus making the system useful for users.

As per claims 31, 32, and 39-41, www.AllMeetings.com does not expressly disclose the system and method as recited in claims 30 and 15, further comprising:

means for generating a common calendar, and means for alerting said plurality of meeting planners to potential meeting conflicts; or sharing meeting scheduling data.

However, www.AllMeetings.com does enable venues to respond to RFPs (reference B, pages 1, 2, 6 and 8). It is old and well known in the art of proposal generating that venues would respond to an RFP with their availability information, with the availability information indicating whether or not the venue already has a meeting scheduled. Thus, at the time of the invention, it would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art for the system of www.AllMeetings.com to generate a common calendar and alert planners of potential meeting conflicts because doing so would allow planners to request and review proposals effectively and aid in venues' proposal generating, thus further enhancing the planning service.

As per claim 42, www.AllMeetings.com discloses the method as recited in claim 39, further comprising:

receiving distressed inventory data, and notifying said plurality of meeting planners of said distressed inventory data (reference B, pages 23-26; The system allows planners to maintain various information on inventory data such as equipment and supplies.).

As per claims 46 and 49, www.AllMeetings.com discloses a new computer system for use in managing the planning of meetings for a plurality of meeting planners, the computer system comprising:

a shared database comprising meeting identification data and meeting scheduling data (reference A, page 1; reference B, pages 6 and 7; The system uses a budget database to store meeting budget data. The system also stores RFPs and RFP requests, which contain meeting scheduling data.);

means for receiving meeting identification data from a plurality of meeting planners (reference B, pages 1 and 8; A user enters meeting start date, length, airport and attendees to identify a meeting. If users have sent RFPs, then meetings are identified that way as well.);

means for receiving meeting scheduling data from a plurality of meeting planners (reference B, page 1; Meeting scheduling data such as start date, length, airport and attendees is received by the web-based interface.); and means for storing data in the shared database (reference A, page 1; reference B, pages 1, 2 and 10; The system stores information regarding hotels and their schedule availability.).

www.AllMeetings.com does not expressly disclose means for generating a common calendar containing meeting identification data and meeting scheduling data for a plurality of meetings, or means for alerting said plurality of meeting planners to potential meeting conflicts. However, www.AllMeetings.com does enable venues to respond to RFPs (reference B, pages 1, 2, 6 and 8). It is old and well known in the art of proposal generating that venues would respond to an RFP with their availability information, with the availability information indicating whether or not the venue already has a meeting scheduled. Thus, at the time of the invention, it would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art for the system of www.AllMeetings.com to generate a common calendar and alert planners of potential meeting conflicts because doing so would allow planners to request and review proposals effectively and aid in venues' proposal generating, thus further enhancing the planning service.

As per claim 47, www.AllMeetings.com discloses the computer system according to claim 46, further comprising:

means for receiving distressed inventory data, and means for notifying said plurality of meeting planners of said distressed inventory data (reference B, pages 23-26; The system allows planners to maintain various information on inventory data such as equipment and supplies.).

As per claim 48, www.AllMeetings.com discloses the computer system according to claim 46, further comprising:

means for receiving resource data for resources required for a meeting (reference B, pages 14-27; The system allows users to utilize checklists, where they enter data regarding various meeting requirements.);

means for generating a request for proposal to send to a supplier of the resource, means for receiving proposal data from the supplier, and means for tracking the request for proposals and the proposal data from the supplier (reference B, pages 2, 6 and 8).
